LABOUR'S POLITICAL POLICE THREATEN OUR FREEDOM!

Police remove memorial to victims of anti-White racism

But can you imagine them doing the same to a memorial to Stephen Lawrence or Anthony Walker?

No freedom for a REAL opposition party to criticise Government policy

CHAIRMAN of the British National Party, Nick Griffin, and his colleague, Mark Collett, were charged under the Race Relations Act after being critical of the Government's policy on immigration and asylum.

West Yorkshire police detailed a team of officers to spend SIX MONTHS examining secretly filmed video tapes of the two BNP officials speaking at local branch meetings in an effort to gather enough evidence against them for a prosecution.

If the same team of officers had been directed to spend a similar amount of time examining video footage of Islamic bookshops in Leeds and Bradford, they might have been able to avert the London suicide bombings and save the lives of 52 people.

No freedom to question Labour's promotion of homosexuality

POLICE questioned a retired couple after they sent a letter to their local council objecting to what they saw as its pro-gay stance.

Joe Roberts, 73, and his wife Helen, 68, of Fleetwood, Lancashire, wrote to Wyre Council complaining about its promotion of gay issues. The regular churchgoers said the council was "pandering" to minority groups and said they felt discriminated against.

A Lancashire Police spokesman said: "A police officer attended an address in Fleetwood to make further inquiries and to establish whether a 'hate' crime had been committed.

The two pensioners join family campaigner, Lynette Burrows, who was 'lent on' by police after she questioned the Government's policy of allowing homosexuals to adopt children during a radio programme. (See page two).

No freedom to remember the victims of Labour's multi-cultural experiment

ASPECIAL memorial to victims of anti-White racism, which was being held in Birmingham City Centre, was broken up by police and photographs of the victims removed.

The memorial remembered Gavin Hopley, Ashley Hedger, Christopher Yates and other victims of the Government's policy of promoting multi-culturalism. But drawing the British people's attention to the fact that 'racism can cut both ways' is just not tolerated by New Labour's political police force.

Labour turns a blind eye to inter-ethnic clashes

AN expert on race relations says the Labour Government is deliberately covering up racial unrest in Britain, and only draws attention to it when it is perpetrated by the white community and can be branded as racist by the media.

Marian FitzGerald, a senior researcher on race issues for the Home Office for 11 years, said Labour is ignoring the growing evidence of inter-ethnic tension building in UK cities.

Mrs FitzGerald said that racial violence between Blacks and Asians is a taboo subject and that police don't know how to handle it because they are dealing an issue that the Government will not acknowledge is taking place.

BIRMINGHAM: Police don't know how to deal with inter-ethnic violence.

"We know where they are because they are claiming benefits"

THE Government has admitted that it is having severe problems coping with the number of asylum seekers and refugees attempting to settle in Britain.

The Commons all-party public accounts committee heard from Jeremy Oppenheim of the National Asylum Seeker Support Service, who admitted that there was a "severe problem and loss of control" in the asylum system.

BURDEN: Failed asylum seekers shouldn't even be here, let alone cashing in on our benefits system.

But a spokesman reacted angrily when it was claimed that the Home Office didn't know the whereabouts of rejected asylum seekers still living in Britain.

"We know their addresses because they are claiming benefits," he told the accounts committee.

It was also revealed that some foreign countries were deliberately working to frustrate attempts to have failed asylum seekers returned to them.

Qualities that make a good police officer

Honesty, integrity and the ability to uphold the law

Not the colour of their skin

by Derek Adams

MANCHESTER Police's obsession with fast track recruiting and positive discrimination for ethnic minorities is not only prejudicial and unfair, it is also downright dangerous.

In October, a policeman from Bury was charged at Oldham Magistrates Court with five counts of misconduct in a public office and of indecent assault in connection with incidents against two women. PC Shajan Miah, 26, resigned from the Greater Manchester Police two days after he was charged with the offences.

In the same month, another Greater Manchester policeman left the force in disgrace after being convicted of a car insurance scam.

PC Shahid Ahmed, 25, tried to dupe senior colleagues by passing off an invalid motor insurance certificate as genuine. Investigating officers discovered the certificate had a different make of car listed on it, and was made out by a company which had not traded for five years.

Then there was the case of PC

No need for quotas

SENIOR police chiefs' almost manic desperation to recruit members of the ethnic minorities to meet 'quotas' is misplaced, according to the most recent Government figures. This puts the country's ethnic minority population at 8%, and the numbers of ethnic police within the force at 9.8%, making the current obsession with positive discrimination unnecessary.

Tariq Mahmood who was involved in a hit and run accident in Ashton-Under-Lyne which injured two women and a child. He had no insurance and tried to lie his way out of trouble by saying his girlfriend was driving the car at the time, he even went to the trouble of having the car re-sprayed in order to avoid detection.

Although the officer was found guilty, he was not dismissed from Greater Manchester police, presumably in the interests of maintaining ethnic quotas. Fast tracking recruits from minority communities in order to meet quotas means that applicants are being chosen solely on a racial basis when they should be chosen on qualities more associated with being a police officer - such as honesty, integrity and the ability to obey the very laws they are charged with upholding.

It is a recruitment policy that is discriminatory against White British applicants and demoralising for serving officers of the indigenous population as the policy also extends to promotional opportunities.

For a serving policeman with a good track record to realise that he has been overlooked for promotion merely because there are not enough black or minority Inspectors in the force must be a bitter pill to have to swallow.

It is about time our police force returned to recruiting on merit and scrapped the quota system. After all what good is having a police force with the correct mix of ethnicity if we cannot trust them to do their job with the honesty, integrity and decency we deserve from our police?

Only the British National Party would restore the tradition of recruiting the best candidates for the job regardless of colour.

Rising crime explodes immigration myth

IT IS estimated that up to half of all murders in London are committed by immigrants and it's a similar story in other British cities.

That's according to the political commentator, Patrick O'Flynn, who was covering the launch of Crimestoppers' new website, Britain's Most Wanted, a photographic rogues gallery which starkly illustrated that most of the Most Wanted were not British.

So worried are Scotland Yard by this rise in immigrant crime that they have set up an intelligence unit specifically to tackle crime by people from Pakistan and Bangladesh. Almost immediately the unit published figures showing a 300% increase in murder rates involving South Asians since 1997. There's also talk of something similar being set up to tackle the escalating crime rate amongst the 200,000 Somalis living in Britain.

On the doorstep in Barking in Essex during last May's General Election, BNP canvassers reported the majority of voters complaining about the crimes perpetrated by the borough's growing Somali community. But it's not just BNP supporters in Barking who are worried. In Southall in West London, Indian residents have lobbied their MP over Somali youths who carry out the majority of street crime and it's a similar story in south-east London where the West Indian community say they are being targeted by Somalis.

Labour, the Tories and the Liberal Democrats all know about the extent of immigrant crime in Britain but they all choose to stay silent in order not to explode the myth that immigration is a benefit to the country.

Only the BNP has the courage to speak out and call for an end to immigration and for all illegal immigrants to be sent back to the countries they came from.

KRAYS: The time of British gangs and thugs running London's underworld are long gone.

Police admit giving priority to ethnic applicants

AVON and Somerset Police rejected 186 job applications for the 180 posts which they advertised because they came from white men.

Chief Constable Colin Port, said: "The force has a recruitment policy which positively discriminates in favour of people from ethnic minority backgrounds as well as people who are transgender, gay, lesbian and bisexual."

The Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) admitted that most forces favour ethnic minority job applications to try to increase 'cultural diversity'.

Homophobic incidents now a 'priority crime'

AFAMILY campaigner has been 'lent on' by police to try to stop her questioning the policy of allowing homosexuals to adopt children.

Lynette Burrows, the author and family campaigner, said she did not believe that homosexuals should be allowed to adopt when she was interviewed on the Victoria Derbyshire show on Radio Five Live.

She said that placing boys with two homosexuals for adoption was as obvious a risk as placing a girl with two heterosexual men who offered themselves as parents.

Within hours of the programme being aired, police contacted Mrs Burrows, who was left shaken by the approach: "They were leaning on me, letting me know that the police had an interest in my views. I think it is sinister and completely unacceptable."

Scotland Yard confirmed that remarks made during the programme were being investigated. A spokesman said: "Homophobic and racist incidents are now priority crimes."

Officers trained in gypsy customs

POLICE in Merseyside are to be trained in gypsy customs to help improve officers' relations with travelling families.

Deputy Chief Constable Jon Murphy, described the training package for officers as "revolutionary".

He said it helped officers understand the "culture and customs of gypsies and travellers to ensure we deliver an efficient, effective and professional service".

Such a gypsy and traveller policy is the first of its kind in the UK.

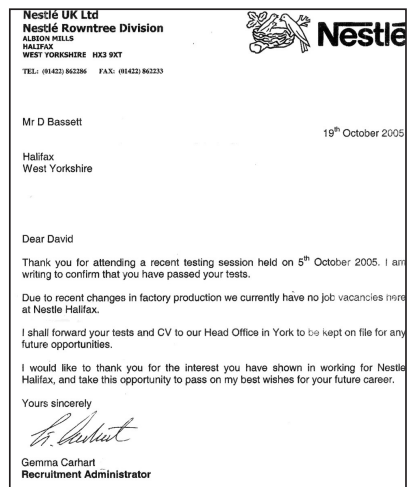

BNP campaigns to keep a local workforce in Halifax

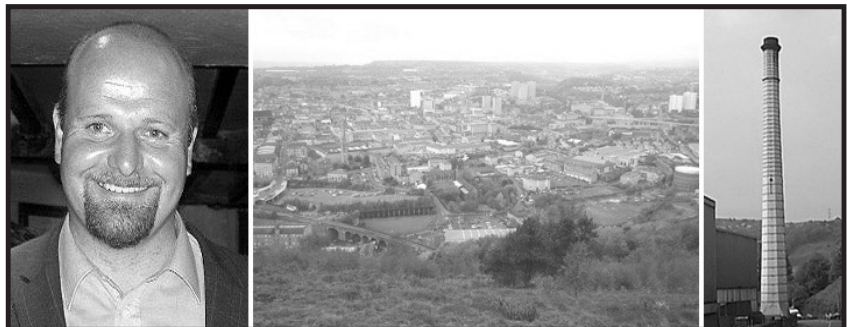

BRITISH National Party Councillor, Richard Mulhall, has launched a scathing attack on the Halifax-based confectionary factory, Nestle, after he discovered that they were refusing to employ local engineers, electricians and plumbers and opting instead to recruit them from Poland.

"One of my constituents, David Bassett, came to me after he was told that there were no jobs at the factory," the Calderdale Councillor told Freedom.

"He was upset because a neighbour working at Nestle had told him the company were recruiting in Poland. "I made some investigations and found that not only were Nestle signing up Polish workers, they were also arranging flights for them, finding LETTER: David Bassett is told there is no work with Nestle in Halifax.

CONCERN: BNP Calderdale Councillor, Richard Mulhall, is worried that local jobs are going to economic migrants and that money earned in Halifax, which should be spent in the town, is being sent abroad.

...and battles to keep a home for football and rugby in the town

THE three BNP councillors voted against Calderdale Council's decision to sell the town's home for football and rugby league, the Shay Stadium, to 'the highest bidder.'

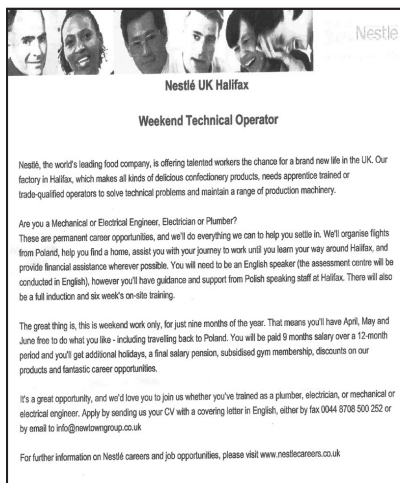

The Council's decision to sell to a developer came in the wake of the Shay Stadium Trust's (SST) request for a £3 million loan.

No council taxpayers' money has been spent on the ground in recent years with the football and rugby clubs left to finance the upgrading of the ground themselves.

But now Calderdale Council proposes to sell the stadium despite agreeing in principal to a minimum 35-year lease before the clubs commenced work on the north and south end terraces.

The BNP councillors believe it is vital that the town has a true community sports stadium and that is why they voted against the sale and support the efforts of the Shay Stadium Trust.

The British National Party's stance was welcome on the football club's website with supporters making their accommodation and providing loans. "This is a scandal, not only because local people are being denied jobs within their own community, but because money earned in Halifax which should be spent in the town supporting Halifax's shops and businesses is being sent back to Poland.

"What is happening here is that a multinational company is using cheap migrant labour to increase its profits. "This means that there is no benefit to the people of Halifax and that is why we shall be exposing this practice."

Richard Mulhall, who represents the town's Illingworth ward, plans a campaign to inform the public of what is taking place so as to raise awareness of Nestle's anti-Halifax employment policies.

views known. One wrote:

"In a town where the needs of the common man and woman are perceived to be consistently neglected, this latest development will produce votes aplenty for the BNP. It's typical of the 'mainstream' parties on this, just the image our town needs - no cinema and no sports stadium.

"I can see the headlines," said another: "The BNP supports professional sport in Calderdale. This will win them support. Can you imagine the reaction locally when they compare what has been spent in the St. John's area by the same Council which has created this absolute debacle at the Shay. Powerful stuff, make no mistake."

BNP councillor Adrian Marsden came in for a mention in another posting.

"I spotted one of our BNP representatives at the Shay and questioned him on the sale. He told me that all his party members were fully behind the Shay Stadium Trust's plans and would continue to support the development as much as they could."

BNP councillors save Christmas in Burnley

THE British National Party's councillors on Burnley Council have ensured that the town will continue to be able to enjoy traditional Christmas and Easter celebrations in the coming years.

Coun. Len Starr and his colleagues proposed the motion which called upon the council:

"Not to repeat the mistakes of other councils in changing the name of Christmas to Winterfest, Christmas lights to winter lights, Easter to Springfest or any other derivatives which attempt to water down our traditional festivals."

Mr Starr told the Burnley Express:

"It is important for Burnley people to feel comfortable in the knowledge that their Christian roots are supported by their borough council. Likewise we will make no attempt to interfere with the traditional festivals of other religions as befits the maturity and confidence of a civilised community. "It is essential that the council makes a clear statement on this, so that the people of Burnley know that their cultural heritage is being protected."

The motion by the British National Party was to pre-empt any attempt by Labour and the Lib-Dems to try and water down British traditions and 'lose the names' of our Christian celebrations in order to win votes from the town's ethnic minorities.

Burnley BNP attack ward closures

BURNLEY BNP organiser David Shapcott, launched a stinging attack on the town's Labour councillors and MP over the decision to close the intensive care and high dependency units at Burnley General Hospital and send patients to Blackburn.

Speaking to a full meeting of the Council, Mr Shapcott said: "Tony Blair is prepared to give away £billions of taxpayers' money to the new EU countries in Eastern Europe, yet his Government can't even fund health care for its own people. Labour politicians in Burnley should be hanging their heads in shame."

Stopping immigration key to dealing with the pension crisis

THANKS to this Labour Government the British people must work until they drop and even then they can't be guaranteed to live out their retirement years with financial security.

New Labour has created Britain's pensions crisis, through Chancellor Gordon Brown stealing billions of pounds every year in extra taxes from pension funds. Home Secretaries Blunkett and Clarke, have made things even worse by allowing unprecedented levels of illegal immigration by millions of spongers who have never paid a penny into our welfare state, but who drain our social services, health and housing budgets.

Britain now faces a pensions crisis because of economic and social mismanagement by a succession of Tory and Labour governments. The British National Party is pledged to ensure that those British people who have made a lifetime of pension and national insurance payments should not lose out because Tony Blair and his new labour cronies are squandering our hard-earned money on people coming to Britain to cash in on our welfare system.

The British National Party will:

- Raise the standard retirement age to sixty-seven, with exceptions, such as nurses and manual workers in a physically demanding profession.
- Help close the skills gap by allowing people who are able and willing to work past retirement age to do so on a special low tax rate, and with their undrawn pension money building up for when they retire.
- Invest in mechanisation so that machines do more of the donkey work in our society. Britain has fallen so far behind in this field that catching up is not only essential, but will also be relatively easy because we can adopt current technology without paying for research.

● Retrain our 'old economy' workers who have been dumped on the long-term sick and early retirement lists as a way of fiddling the unemployment figures. Giving these people back their dignity, self-reliance and pride wouldn't just help solve the pensions crisis, it would also cut the human waste and health tragedies that spring from the plight of working men who are told that they can't work any more.

● Stop the mass immigration that is stretching our social services and health budgets to breaking point.

PENALISED: Despite paying in a life time of contributions, our senior citizens are worse off than newly arrived migrants who have not paid a penny towards the services they utilise.

Inclusive initiative only raises the question of loyalty

THE British Army has received its first Muslim, Buddhist, Hindu and Sikh 'chaplains', in line with a politically correct Government initiative to make the services appear more inclusive. But the move backfired when it was revealed just how unwilling members of the ethnic minorities actually are to fight for what most of them clearly do not regard as their country. An imam will minister to just 305 Muslims, a guru to just 220 Buddhists, a priest to just 230 Hindus, and a priestess to just 90 Sikhs. There are 183,000 Christian soldiers, with 300 padres looking after their spiritual needs. The numbers reveal how little these minorities really identify with our country, beyond the useful formality of its passport. If Muslims were in the Army in proportion even to the (absurdly low) official figure of 1.6 million of them living in Britain, there would be over 5,500 Islamic squaddies, not just 305. In fact, there are certainly more British-born Muslims, with British passports, fighting in the ranks of al Qaeda and the Taliban than in the British Army. This is because they know which side their religion puts them on, and that's an allegiance even the commissioning of a mullah as a chaplain officer in our army won't be able to change.

AUTONOMOUS: Introducing elements of Sharia law into British society helps form a parallel Islamic nation within Britain.

Infiltration of Sharia law threatens human rights

A REPORT on the growth of Islam in Britain warns that the Muslim community is seeking to infiltrate Sharia, the law which defines Islam, into the British legal system to give the country a distinct Islamist dimension.

The Institute for the Study of Islam and Christianity (ISIC) is worried that this will lead to a dual legal system which would be highly damaging to our traditional legal system. The report says that integrating Sharia precepts into British law would gradually impose elements of Islamic religious law on the British people. This would mean that the human rights of individuals, which are enshrined in our law, would be compromised as an equality of service is not being offered to all customers.

Dr Patrick Sookhdeo, the Director of ISIC and author of the report, believes that Muslim communities are actively forming a parallel society within Britain, becoming autonomous and establishing their own "nation within a nation."

Positive discrimination boosts ethnic minority magistrates

FAST TRACK: Ethnic minorities who want to become magistrates are getting a helping hand thanks to a taxpayer-funded Government scheme.

THE GOVERNMENT is ploughing more taxpayers' money into schemes enabling people from ethnic minorities to become magistrates. The Magistrates Shadow Scheme encourages people from ethnic minorities to participate in the delivery of justice and experience the work of a magistrate. One hundred and twenty five ethnic applicants will shadow magistrates for six months in 15 different areas across England and Wales. The scheme has produced 18 magistrates and 50 more have applied to join the magistracy since it started in Bristol and Birmingham in 2001. Simon Woolley, Director of Operation Black Vote which is behind the scheme, believes it is changing the face of the criminal justice system: "Now black men and women are taking their place on the benches dispensing justice and building confidence between Black and other ethnic communities and the courts."

Labour breaks its promise to the six regiments

THE Government went against the wishes of the Scottish people when it decided to amalgamate Scotland's six historic Army Regiments into one single unit.

Now it has reneged on a promise it made to the six regiments that their specific identity could be retained through their distinctive headgear and cap badges, including the Black Watch's famous red hackle on their Tam O' Shanter. The British National Party campaigned against the amalgamation and have made it party policy to restore all six Regiments when in a position to do so.

FACES: What about a Phillips fiver?

Cashing in on 'White Guilt'

A LABOUR Party think-tank has suggested that putting black faces and scenes of black history on Britain's bank notes will help tackle institutional racism.

The Fabian Society want to ditch the current notes which show Sir Edward Elgar, Elizabeth Fry, and Charles Darwin together with scenes of their achievements, and replace them with the likes of Nelson Mandela, Martin Luther King and Mahatma Gandhi. The Fabian Society believes that the symbolism of changing the look of our currency will accentuate the guilt White Britons feel for the Empire and will stop them from speaking out against any further immigration.

Equality and diversity

THE GOVERNMENT has spent more than £100 million of taxpayers' money on 'equality and diversity' schemes since 2001. Recently released figures revealed that the Home Office alone spent £72 million on supporting ethnic minority, lesbian, gay, bisexual and transsexual members of staff.

RISKY STRATEGY: General Michael Walker, Chief of Britain's Armed Forces, appealed for more Muslims to join up during a speech to the Muslim Council of Britain. He promised any new recruits "high quality training!"

WOMEN OF BRITAIN Your country needs you

Come and join our winning team

NEARLY HALF of the membership of the British National Party is made up of women and we need that represented in the BNP candidates standing at the local elections on Thursday May 4th.

Women make the best candidates because they render much of the Labour Party's anti-BNP literature, talking about nazis and skinheads, irrelevant to voters. University students, career women, wives, mothers and grandmothers are asked to come forward in the country's hour of need and stand as British National Party candidates in the next round of local elections.

Unchecked immigration, coupled with the high birth-rate amongst ethnic minorities already living in Britain, means that for every day that goes by the influence of the native people of these lands is diminishing.

The British National Party must start gaining significant representation on local authorities if it is to assert more influence on behalf of the British people. We have got to win more and more council seats to show that we are an effective electoral force which commands large swathes of support within the country.

If you are worried about the way our country is heading then please do something about. The more women candidates the BNP can put up on May 4th, the better the chances we have of getting representatives elected.

Women also make excellent councillors as proved by Sharon Wilkinson, who leads the BNP group on Burnley Council, helped by two other lady councillors, Patricia Thompson and Carol Hughes (the BNP's first ever lady councillor). Pat Richardson is the leader of the BNP group on Epping Council and Angela Clarke represents the BNP on Bradford City Council and Keighley Town Council.

If you would like to stand in May then please contact your Regional Organiser, or Regional Nominating Officer as soon as possible. If you are not certain who these officials are then please write together with your CV to: Tony Lecomber, The National Nominating Officer, PO Box 1032, Woodford Green, Essex IG8 9GN.

Freedom's Referendum on Islam - Thursday 4th May 2006

THE British National Party's newspaper, Freedom, has launched its 'May 4th is Referendum Day' campaign in preparation for this year's local council elections.

The purpose of the campaign is to give the public a chance to voice their concern over the growth of Islam in Britain. Freedom editor, Martin Wingfield explains:

"A large section of British people feel threatened by the rapid growth of the Muslim population in Britain but at present have no way of voicing this concern. Our 'May 4th is Referendum Day' campaign gives people that voice. Every vote for the British National Party tells Tony Blair of this groundswell of disquiet."

An A5 black and white leaflet is now online and can be downloaded from the website. Bulk supplies at £6.00 per 1000 are available from: The Secretary, PO Box 158, Deeside, Flintshire CH5 2WW.

A colour A4 poster is also available online for downloading.

May 4th 2006: The campaign starts here

The British National Party is making the local council elections next year a referendum when the British people can voice their concern over the growth of Islam in Britain. Please help the BNP inform the electorate of just how important their vote is on Thursday 4th May by sending a donation. I enclose £ towards the BNP campaign for the 'Referendum on Islam'.

British National Party WHERE WE STAND

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and the scandal of bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the billions now wasted in foreign aid to fund generous 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the EU for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside; a ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need and an end to field trials of genetically modified crops.

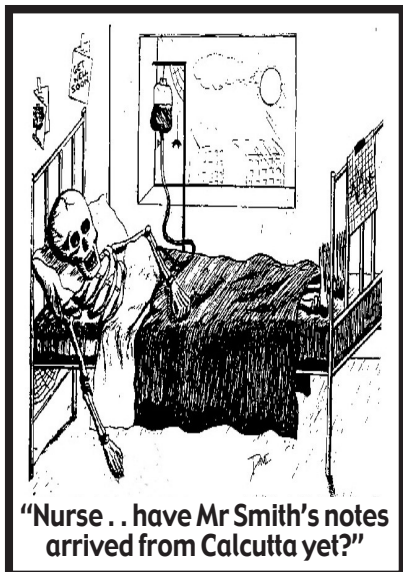

FARMING & FISHING: The regeneration of British farming, with the objective of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food. The restoration of the fishing industry through protection of our traditional fishing grounds.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: A massive expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The adoption of popular referenda and high technology direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Armed Forces and cost thousands of jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last thing. Like all other democratic political parties, the BNP includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of the other parties. Most people

"Nurse... have Mr Smith's notes arrived from Calcutta yet?"

Hospital dumps its medical secretaries for typists in India

MORE than 80 medical secretaries at the Lister Hospital in Stevenage face the sack after NHS bosses decided to outsource their jobs to India.

The East and North Hertfordshire NHS Trust believes that by using workers in India for the hospital's medical transcription service, it can help save money.

The Trust has ignored warnings from other companies that also sent transcription work to India. Almost all reverted back to UK services because the out-sourced work was full of mistakes.

The job of medical secretary involves a lot more than just typing up patients' notes. As with all 'speciality' secretaries, it is knowledge of the specific subject which makes the secretary proficient.

The East and North Hertfordshire NHS Trust denied that the move was just to save money, claiming it would 'increase efficiency'. But a spokesman said that it was of concern to the Trust that "there were racist undertones to the arguments being used by those opposing the jobs shift to India."

Now even hi-tech jobs are being exported

MORE than 150 jobs are to go at a hi-tech fibre-optics plant in south Devon after US-based Bookham Technology announced it was transferring its laser chip business to China.

The redundant workers will join more than 600 colleagues who lost their jobs last year, and the 4,000 who lost their jobs when the plant was previously owned by Canadian firm, Nortel networks.

JOB: Exported from Devon to China

Such hi-tech industries were the ones on which the Government said Britain must build its economic future after the decline in British manufacturing, but now even these jobs are being exported to cheap labour countries.

BNP now left alone to carry the torch for immigration controls and family values

THE BRITISH National Party has been left on its own as the country's only real opposition party prepared to defend our traditional principles against the politically correct agenda that has now been adopted by all three mainstream parties.

The election of David Cameron as Conservative Party leader has ruthlessly silenced the voice of traditional conservatism and has left the people of Britain with all their main political parties singing from the same song sheet.

Tony Blair and Government must be rubbing their hands with glee because they now have the perfect opposition. Even if the Tories or the Liberal Democrats win the next General Election, New Labour's social, cultural, constitutional and economic policies are in safe hands and guaranteed to be continued.

Defending family values and introducing immigration controls were the two Conservative policies that set the party apart from Labour and the Lib-Dems.

Now David Cameron has abandoned this last significant difference from the established liberal consensus, leaving the half of the population that supports the traditional and patriotic way forward without a voice... apart from the British National Party.

The change in direction was heralded by the Tories appointing a lesbian activist as a vice-chairman of the party. Margo James is a millionaire businesswoman who became the first openly lesbian Conservative to stand for Parliament when she fought Holborn and St Pancras at the General Election.

Another vice-chairman's post goes to Sayeeda Warsi, a former race relations adviser who stood in Dewsbury, attempting to become Britain's first Muslim woman MP.

Miss Warsi and Ms James are expected to benefit from an A-list scheme announced by the new Tory leader to put his favoured colleagues in winnable parliamentary seats at the next election.

Within days of David Cameron taking over the reins, the Conservative Party Chairman Francis Maude announced that immigration had been "fantastically good" for Britain. The party then called for the European Union worker registration scheme, which helps limit the number of people coming to Britain from the Eastern European countries, to be scrapped.

David Cameron said the Tories were jettisoning its policy calling for stricter immigration controls and would now welcome those fleeing persecution in their own countries. He told the Daily Mail:

"That means not just letting them in, but taking them to our hearts, feeding, clothing and schooling them".

It was unfortunate timing coming just a week after a policewoman was gunned down on a Bradford street by a gang of Somali asylum seekers.

These dramatic changes within the Conservative Party, all made in such a short space of time, will have a demoralising effect on a large section of the membership. Back in April, the Chairman of a Conservative Association in Yorkshire complained about the BNP putting up a candidate in his constituency. "You are taking our vote and it's counter productive," he wrote to Freedom:

"Hardly one of our meetings goes by without Enoch Powell being mentioned, and Michael Howard's strong stance on immigration shows the Conservatives know of the dangers facing this country and are prepared to tackle them head on."

In less than six months all this has changed. The Tories are now just like New Labour, a party of professional political careerists who even the torchbearers for the liberal left, the BBC and The Guardian, are happy to talk up as a future Government for this country.

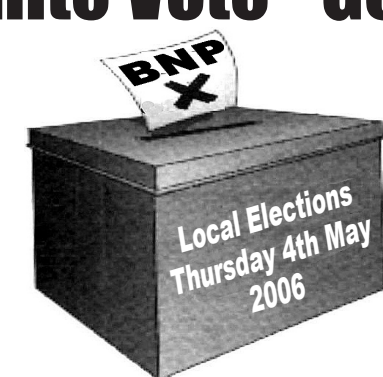

TODAY'S TORIES: Just like Labour, a party of professional political careerists who the liberal left are comfortable talking up as a future Government.

Operation White Vote - Get Registered!

IN May a handful of votes could determine whether or not a British National Party candidate gets elected to a council.

The Labour Party knows that its support comes from the ethnic minorities and that is why it is spending a small fortune on Operation Black Vote to get as many immigrants as possible to register to vote in May. The British National Party needs to do the same and that is why we are launching Operation White Vote to get every native Briton on their electoral register.

Many of our supporters are still not registered and the Electoral Commission estimates that up to 4 million potential voters are not registered.

It is vital for BNP members, supporters and Freedom readers to encourage relatives, friends and work colleagues who support our party to register to vote.

Registration forms can be obtained from local councils or downloaded from www.aboutmyvote.co.uk and you must register by Monday 13th March if you wish to vote in the local elections on May 4th.

Remember it is your vote that could give your local council a British National Party councillor.

Lithuania and East Timor clash in Dungannon

INTER-communal riots have been a depressingly common feature of life in Northern Ireland over past decades but the one that broke out in Dungannon, Co. Tyrone, was something new.

The rival gangs laying into each other with sticks and cudgels and smashing up any car in the vicinity were from the town's new Lithuanian and East Timorese communities.

The rioting broke out between rival bands of immigrants shipped in to provide cheap labour at the town's Moy Park poultry factory.

The Lithuanians were in Dungannon because their country, on the eastern shore of the Baltic Sea, has just joined the European Union. Quite what the East Timorese, from an island between Java and Australia previously ruled by the Portuguese and Indonesians but never by Britain, were doing there is not quite clear.

But what is crystal clear is that it is the local people who suffer from this influx of cheap foreign labour. It's an area that already has one of the highest rates of unemployment anywhere in the British Isles.

Sending 'British' money abroad hurts local communities

BRTAIN is to spend £7.5 billion pounds to reduce the cost and improve efficiency when sending money to Bangladesh from Bangladeshi communities living in Britain.

This money, known as remittances, is earned in Britain but then transferred to family members back in Bangladesh.

The transfer of money out of Britain hurts the areas from where the money was earned. When a factory pays its workforce, the shops and businesses in the community around that factory hope the money is spent locally so that such services can be maintained and the area can thrive.

When a portion of these vital funds is sent overseas it is the local community that suffers.

The Government should be making it harder to send money out of the country not paying to make it easier.

Minorities get job help

TAXPAYERS' money is being used to finance a special scheme to help people from ethnic minorities into employment in Bury in Lancashire.

The 'Routeways to Work in Bury' programme will be based at a work centre at the town's Asian Development Association and will offer daily surgeries to help with CVs, job applications and filling local vacancies. It will also organise job fairs, promote public sector employment opportunities and liaise with personnel managers.

For Bury's White unemployed there's no such Government help, just their place in the dole queue.

Minorities harass asylum seekers

REFUGEE ghettos are being created around the country because the Government is sending asylum seekers to places that already have a large ethnic minority population, a report has said. An independent study commissioned by the Home Office suggested that more refugees should be settled in affluent parts of the country. The study found that asylum seekers were three times more likely to be assaulted in areas with a high ethnic minority population and were also, surprisingly, twice as likely to face racial harassment in such areas.

Anglers in fear from fish thieves

IMMIGRANTS from Eastern Europe are removing vast quantities of fish from our lakes with huge nets and traps that threaten the very future of angling in parts of the country. One 100-yard net was found on Cambridgeshire's River Ouse and similar nets have been found in other areas across Britain. Freedom has reported over the last three years the growing incidents of immigrants stealing coarse fish using set lines, but this new revelation of using huge gill nets to increase the catch takes the stealing to new fish-stock threatening levels. The Environment Agency echoes the concern of anglers with their spokesman, Stephen Gledhill, confirming: "Such incidents are becoming common."

RIVER OUSE: A massive 100-yard gill net was found by anglers.

The Angling Times unearthed a wealth of evidence of fish stealing as part of an investigation into dwindling fish stocks, discovering nationwide concern amongst anglers that little was being done about the problem. Some anglers claimed political correctness was stopping the authorities tackling the crime because immigrants were involved, while others were even too frightened to talk to the newspaper for fear of reprisals from the fish thieves.

1-in-5 babies to mums not born in Britain

NEARLY 640,000 infants were born in England and Wales in 2004 up almost three per cent on the previous year. One in five of them were to mothers not born in Britain, a huge change from one in eight a decade earlier. There were no figures published for the number of ethnic minority births. The number of babies born outside wedlock is also rising, up to 42% last year.

Another unwanted immigrant

Chinese Mitten crab

MOST people know of the havoc caused by the imported grey squirrel to our native red squirrel habitats and the destruction wreaked on our native woodland environments by the imported monkjack deer.

Well now there's another unwanted immigrant. The Chinese mitten crab has been released in our waterways and now threatens our environment.

This latest arrival to our shores doesn't like our strong river currents, so it burrows into the riverbank causing the entire bank to become unstable and collapse into the river.

Another unpleasant trait of the mitten crab is its wholesale slaughter of our native river crab, to such an extent that they have nearly been eradicated from stretches of our south east waterways.

Supermarkets fuel farm price crisis

by Dan McLean

THERE HAVE been reports in recent issues of Freedom on the large supermarket chains who seek to dominate areas, putting small local shops out of business.

However it is not just small businesses who are being squeezed out of existence. The supermarkets are also crippling our farmers.

For the last 30 years the UK has been bombarded with imported beef, lamb, pork and vegetables. This has forced British farmers to give up breeding cattle, sheep and pigs and switch to growing cereals in an effort to stay in business.

Farmers used to be able to grow produce and set their own price for their own goods. These would be sold to supermarkets and local shops at a price on which farmers could make a decent living. But now they are being coerced into contracts for their goods by supermarkets which now tell the farmer what to grow, how much to grow and what price they will pay for these goods.

Back in the 1970's farmers were paid around £100 per ton for cereal crops such as wheat, barley and oats, whilst potatoes were anything between £80 to £200 per ton, depending on the quality and market needs.

Today cereal crops are selling for just under £100 per ton and potatoes in the region of £60 - £150 per ton.

This means that farmers haven't seen a rise in produce prices since the 1970's but they still have to try to sustain a viable business.

Over the years farmers have had to struggle with inflated prices and things such as machinery, fuel, chemicals,

Rural Viewpoint: A Scottish farmer speaks out against the power of the supermarkets seed, as well as workers wages have been on the increase, yet the prices paid for their produce have not risen. Meanwhile, supermarket prices have doubled, tripled and quadrupled since the 1970's whilst the farm gate price is stuck in a 30 year time warp. Back in the 1980's the Conservative Government encouraged massive imports of meat and other farm produce which contributed to a surplus of British produce, leading to the butter and grain mountains. To resolve this problem the Tories created set-aside land on each farm, which meant that every farmer had to leave 12% of their land fallow for a

In those days farmers would have made more money growing crops on this land, rather than receiving payment for doing nothing.

Now New Labour has done away with set-aside but with the current squeeze on farm prices, it is not worth growing more crops.

In my area of East Lothian, farmers have given up growing potatoes, or rearing cattle and sheep to try other ventures, such as selling land for housing or turning their fields into holiday parks or even golf courses.

There is a demand for British produce and yet New Labour allows the large supermarket chains to cripple our farming industry. This policy will lead to there being so little home-grown produce that imported foods will be the major player in our food chain and our rural areas will be in poverty and distress.

Next time you want to buy farm produce, think seriously about where it comes from. Make sure it is British and if in doubt, then go to your local farm shop or farmers' market and support your local growers where quality will be assured and at a realistic price.

Islam targets schools in East London

LABOUR'S education reforms have given faith organisations a 'green light' to set up charitable trusts to run state schools.

This is worrying the teaching profession who believe that extreme religious sects will see this as an opportunity to take control of schools and peddle their fanatical message.

One East London teacher emailed Freedom to voice her concerns:

"In my area faith groups are queuing up to take over the local schools and every group advocates one shade or another of fundamental Islam.

"It's absolute nonsense for the Department for Education to claim that the requirements of 'promoting community cohesion and good race relations' will act as a safeguard. Any teacher or parent daring to speak out against this Islamification of our schools would be branded 'a racist', so everyone is going to stay silent.

"My colleagues and I know that once a school is taken over by one of these religious sects the first people to get their marching orders will be non-Muslim teachers.

£93 million in debt but NHS Trust still funds Asian cookery lessons

THE zero-star Surrey and Sussex Health Trust is £93 million pound in debt and has been forced to close three operating theatres and an entire ward at Crawley Hospital in a desperate attempt to save money.

Yet the Trust is still spending taxpayers' money on providing Asian cookery courses and Asian Ladies' Exercise classes.

One English patient at the hospital applied to join the cookery course but was told it was open only to Asians.

When she complained she was told that the NHS Trust was within its rights because Asians were a special case for preferential treatment due to their increased risk of diabetes and coronary heart disease.

Camden Council puts Islam before animal welfare

PARENTS OF Muslim school-children in Camden in West London were furious when they found out that the halal school dinners being provided by Camden Council were not prepared to the strictest interpretation of the Koran.

The council had hoped to appease both Islamic and animal welfare lobbies by using meat that had been ritually slaughtered by a more humane method whereby the animal still has its throat cut while conscious, but had at least been stunned first.

Now any animal welfare interests have been set aside to accommodate the wishes of Camden's Muslim community. Just like any regard for Camden's non-Muslim community was set aside last year when the council secretly introduced halal meat for all school dinners in the borough's schools.

The new set of rules for school dinners, including rights of tender, were drawn up by a panel of senior Camden Muslims and accepted fully by the council. Labour councillor, Janet Guthrie, admitted that school meals had "become an embarrassment to the council", but added "I'm pleased that we are now seem to be getting back on track." - Back on track towards a society dictated by Islamic interests?

When halal meat is used in school dinners it raises the price of each meal by around 15%. This additional cost came to light when BNP councillors in Halifax investigated their council's use of halal meat in school dinners.

There was a festive spirit at the BNP demonstration in support of Nick Griffin and Mark Collett outside Leeds Crown Court just before Christmas. Things will be much more serious for the start of the actual proceedings on Thursday 16th January.

March will be D-Day for 'BNP two' fighting to get their jobs back

AT THE end of March BNP councillor, Arthur Redfearn, will have his employment tribunal hearing in the case of his dismissal from his job with West Yorkshire Transport Services (WYTS). WYTS claimed that they had sacked the Bradford City councillor on 'health and safety grounds' after it was discovered he was standing for election as a BNP candidate. But now a tribunal will consider whether he was discriminated against and whether WYTS's claim of health and safety reasons was genuinely founded and properly formulated. Arthur's solicitor, Philip Chapman, said: "This case is important, not just for him but there's a public interest as well. It is about the principle of whether somebody can be penalised in the workplace – in this case losing his job – simply because he has chosen to be a member of a particular political party."

Awaiting the outcome of Arthur's case will be Tina Wingfield, a Primary Care Health Worker from Cumbria. She was suspended from work after a report in a local newspaper linked her with the British National Party. Tina worked for the North Cumbria NHS Trust in Carlisle as a graduate mental health worker, but a week after the report appeared in the News and Star she was told that she was suspended from her job pending an internal enquiry.

After nearly three months of investigations the Trust said they had found "no evidence of unprofessional behaviour and as a result will not be taking any disciplinary action."

But the Trust went on to say that the post she had been employed in had been discontinued and they were unable to offer her suitable alternative employment.

Tina's appeal against her dismissal has now been put on hold after solicitors for the North Cumbria NHS Trust asked the tribunal to delay proceedings "until the outcome of the Redfearn case."

Craig is Blackpool BNP's Activist of the Year

ON Monday 19th of December, the Blackpool BNP Branch held its usual Christmas social and annual presentation evening.

The event was held at an extremely plush and comfortable hotel on Blackpool's South Promenade, and was a great success with around 70 members and supporters in attendance along with special guest, Burnley BNP councillor Sharon Wilkinson.

Sharon, who is also the leader of the BNP group on Burnley Council, gave a fitting speech about how important all activist are to the success of the party. She then went on to conduct the presentation of the annual awards to the branch's leading activists.

The top activist of the year was Craig Hamilton, who was presented with a very impressive engraved hip flask and a certificate of merit. This year's runner up Robert Ewing (who incidentally was last year's winner) was given with a certificate of merit along with Brian Hunter, who took the third place spot.

There were the usual fund raising events which brought in substantial financial rewards for the branch and if the invitation from the hotel's manager to come again soon is anything to go by, the financial arrangements for the evening were certainly mutual.

Christmas dinner with Epping BNP

AROUND forty BNP members from the Epping Forest area met up for Christmas dinner on 17th December at a plush restaurant in Loughton, Essex - a venue much used by footballers wives and well known television 'celebrities'. It was a thoroughly enjoyable event, and a great way to build upon the positive team spirit that motivates the dedicated activists in this area and prepare them for the hard work in store for next year's local elections. Our own celebrities were out in force too - all three Epping councillors, Terry Farr and Pat and Tom Richardson, recent Grays Riverside candidate Emma Colgate, National Elections

Working within your local community is the way forward

WHEN British National Party Chairman Nick Griffin, speaking at the recent London conference, called upon activists to work within their communities to help promote the BNP he might well have used Coventry and Warwickshire BNP as an example. Brian Hadland and George Jones are very active in their area of Kenilworth, always out leafleting and selling Freedom and getting involved with local issues. Recently they organised a campaign for a pedestrian crossing and traffic calming measures in Albion Street which has seen a threefold increase in the volume of cars using it after nearby Birches Lane was closed. Parents of pupils from nearby St

Nicholas CE Primary School contacted the two BNP campaigners with their concerns over speeding traffic, and they were joined by a pensioners' group who wanted a pedestrian crossing so that their members could reach the local shopping centre safely. "Most folk around here know our politics and they come to us because they know we care about the community," Brian Hadland told Freedom.

"Albion Street is very dangerous and it is getting worse. Cars are having to stop because the elderly can't get across. There just aren't long enough breaks in the traffic." Brian and George have also raised the issue of Diwali lights being hung alongside Christmas ones in nearby Leamington and the bill to be met by ratepayers. After Brian and George queried the funding arrangements, Warwickshire District Council indicated that they would, in future, be asking the town's Indian community to pay for their Diwali lights.

Those who inspire our ideology: No.7 JOHN BUCHAN

Just a thread separates civilization from barbarism

JOHN BUCHAN (1875-1940) is mainly remembered today as the author of the thriller novel The Thirty-Nine Steps, whose hero, Richard Hannay, was in many (though not all) ways the prototype of James Bond.

But he also enjoyed a career that encompassed, amongst many other roles, practising at the Bar, war service as a military intelligence officer and being elected to Westminster as a Conservative MP. He also served as Lord High Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and was the Governor-General of Canada.

The son of a humble Fife minister, John Buchan was a shining exemplar of patriotic public service, who at the same time put forward ideas for Britain's role in the world which, had they been heeded, would have placed her in the forefront of a world power made up of our own kith and kin, instead of adhering to the European Union. Buchan also issued a warning of the Islamic threat to the West, something sufficiently timely to be pulled hastily from the BBC airwaves after the July 7th bombings!

WORLD WAR 1: Buchan served as a military intelligence officer.

Buchan's vision, shared by other radical patriots of his day such as Joseph Chamberlain and Cecil Rhodes, was of the British-settled Dominions such as Canada, Australia and New Zealand confederating with the Mother Country to build a Greater British superpower.

As Buchan put it:

"I dreamed of a world-wide brotherhood with the background of a common race and creed, consecrated to the service of peace; Britain enriching the rest with her culture and traditions, and the spirit of the Dominions like a strong wind freshening the stuffiness of the old lands.

"I saw in the Empire a means of giving to the congested masses at home open country instead of a blind alley. Our creed was not based on antagonism to any other people".

Instead of importing immigrants to a shrinking island, Buchan wanted our country to export her people to an expanding British world. Buchan's dream of Britain's world role as motherland of a global ethnically-British superpower stands in stark contrast to our feeble role in the current EU nightmare.

Buchan's dream never came true. Betrayed because the Tory Party he supported lacked his vision and the radicalism he believed should be part of its creed - he also expressed a preference for socialism over "orthodox liberalism" - and fell into the palsied hands of political eunuchs content to "manage decline".

But one of his nightmares has been realised. In 1916, in Greenmantle, one of the sequels to The Thirty Nine Steps, Buchan's heroes, Richard Hannay and Sandy Arbuthnot, battle an anti-Western Islamic jihad, led by a figure eerily reminiscent of Osama bin Laden. The book is alarmingly prophetic, except that determined British officers, unhobbled by political correctness, take decisive action to nip the proto-al-Qaeda in the bud.

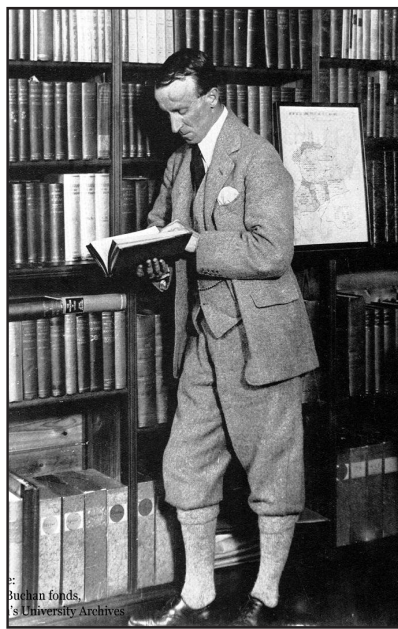

Decisive action was indeed taken on this issue by their successors in charge of our country. A dramatisation of Greenmantle was being broadcast as a series on BBC Radio Four. Immediately after Islamic militants bombed London on July 7th, the BBC pulled the plug on the rest of the series. Buchan's warning of the threat of Islamic militancy was described by the BBC authorities as "unsuitable and insensitive" - now it had so horribly come true decades later.

We can only hope, as the West reels under the impact of Islam, immigration, environmental collapse and economic globalization, that Buchan's other nightmare is not also realized:

"You think," he warned in 1916, "that a wall as solid as the Earth separates civilization from barbarism. I tell you the division is a thread, a pane of glass. A touch here, a push there, and you bring back the reign of Saturn" - the god of chaos, mayhem, anarchy and catastrophe.

John Buchan's dreams died, starved - like many other such visions of British greatness in fields from technology to politics to culture to industry over the past lifetime - of the energy, vision and leadership to give them flesh. For the same reason, from the bomb-blasted burrows under London to the blazing banlieues around Paris, his nightmares have lived and grown to haunt us . . .

PROPHETIC: His book, Greenmantle, written back in 1914, predicted an anti-Western Islamic jihad.

SALLY WOOD Straight talking!

The breaking up of the United Kingdom

BRYHTNOTH
A valiant stand

FOR MOST people Tony Blair's legacy when he goes will be the Iraq war debacle, but I think he is far more likely to be remembered for the break up of the United Kingdom.

He has set the ball rolling towards devolved government and once rolling it now has a momentum all of its own which appears to be unstoppable.

Already the government is proposing the biggest transfer of power from Westminster to Wales since the Welsh Assembly was created in 1999 and now promises the Welsh a referendum of full law making powers after the next election. The Conservatives not to be outdone are promising the Scots a full handover of tax raising powers to Holyrood if they win the next election, that is if the Scots wish it. This leaves a very real democratic deficit in England.

It seems that Tony Blair has great difficulty in even pronouncing the word England. In a recent speech he gave on education, which due to devolved powers only applied to England, he managed to speak at length without once mentioning the word as if its very utterance would have choked him. Certainly not for him are thoughts of an English parliament. He would far rather take us down another route.

Although the north of England voted against regional administrations, they still lurk there in the shadows like an evil spirit. It seems that the aim is for England to disappear, transformed into separate regions. Towards this objective we already hear talk that the historic shires are to disappear and then there's the decision to regionalize the police force.

This land is soaked in the blood of our ancestors who from the time of the first true English King Athelstan fought for England and the Crown. It was in the reign of Ethelred that the men of Essex under Earl Bryhtnoth made a valiant stand against the Vikings at the Battle of Malden. They fought to the last man, for all were slain and their courage has been immortalised in a famous Anglo Saxon poem. To avenge this and further attacks the English rose en masse on St. Bryce's Day and slaughtered the Danes.

We live today in more civilized times, but are we just to sit back and watch our country disappear and become just regions in an EU superstate? The time has come to raise our voices in protest throughout the land, that is something that we owe our ancestors.

Those voices from the past

I always believed myself to be as Tony Hancock described himself: 100% Anglo-Saxon with a dash of Viking!

I RECENTLY took part in a project run by the National Geographic Society to further research into the human genome. I duly sent off my DNA sample and was later informed that my mitochondrial DNA indicated a descent from the first people to enter Europe 45,000 years ago.

I am descended from the clan mother who Bryan Sykes in his book, The Seven Daughters of Eve, called Ursula. She is also the clan mother of the Cheddar Man whose remains were found at Gough Cave in the Cheddar Gorge and which have been radio carbon dated to thirteen thousand years ago.

I have always believed myself to be as Tony Hancock described himself: 100% Anglo-Saxon with just a dash of Viking, but this opens up the possibility that my ancestors may have been in these islands, roaming these hills for up to thirteen thousand years.

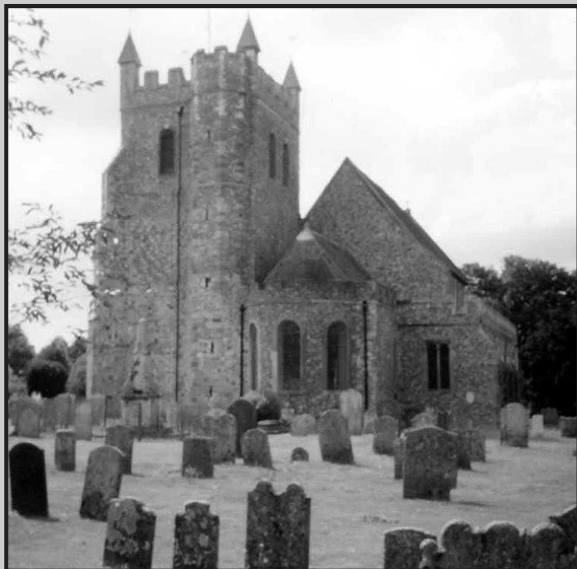

This started me thinking more about the pre-history of the islands. It is a period much neglected and this is commented upon and lamented by Francis Pryor in his recent book, Britain BC. In the afterword he discusses the fact that the history lessons taught at school always seem to commence with the Roman invasion as though all that went before is immaterial.

We are always being told how the Romans civilized us yet nothing is said however of the fact that when they arrived we Britons had already been fashioning iron tools and weapons for seven hundred years. We grew most of the common crops to be found today and possessed sophisticated wheeled vehicles. Our artisans and craftsmen were capable of producing works of art that hold alongside the finest creations to be found in the ancient world.

Up until the Conquest we had been an insular people who had also been very capable of keeping feuding to manageable proportions and this in a society which was at that time remarkably egalitarian.

The blood of these ancient people still courses through our veins. They have instilled in us a belief in individual freedom. A belief which still resonates today in the wish to throw off the yoke of the EU and all its stifling laws. Could it be that the voices can still be heard echoing down the centuries of our freedom loving iron-age ancestors?

Please remember us in your Will

MUCH AS we wish all our members a long and healthy life, the fact is that at the appointed time we all have to leave this world and thought needs to be given to the provision of those that are left behind. Naturally those with families will wish to provide for them, but you may also feel the need to leave something behind that will ultimately benefit the Party. Others may wish to leave everything to the BNP in order to fuel our struggle and make success more assured. If you do want to leave the Party something in your Will, or need help in making a Will, please write in for a BNP Wills pack to P.O. Box 1032, Woodford Green, Essex IG8 9GN.

Classic British poetry axed by multi-cultural censorship

CLASSIC works from Britain's best poets are being dropped from GCSE course work and replaced by offerings from Pakistan and the West Indies in order to promote the multi-cultural society. Chaucer, Blake, Milton, Keats, Gray and Tennyson have all been blackballed by exam boards and students told to focus on poems from Africa and Asia.

The required poetry anthology has only 15 classic poems out of a total of 64, but includes the likes of Moniza Alvi's Presents from My Aunts in Pakistan and John Agard's Half-Caste written in Caribbean dialect. The work of the poets of the Great War, Siegfried Sassoon and Wilfred Owen have also been axed. The latter's work, Anthem for Doomed Youth, seems to aptly describe this latest censorship of British culture.

In their efforts to promote multi-culturalism, educationalists are denying schoolchildren the chance of understanding, reciting and listening to the best of British poetry.

Keeping the sole seven white children together is divisive

A PRIMARY school in Blackburn has been accused of being divisive after all its new white pupils were grouped together in the same reception class.

The 71 new starters at Lammack Primary School were divided into three classes, with two consisting exclusively of Asian pupils. The seven white pupils were put together in a class with 17 Asian children.

Union leaders said the school was segregating its four and five-year-olds and one Asian parent said it was a form of apartheid.

But headteacher Mary Lewis defended the decision explaining:

"The younger children are placed in friendship groups for part of the day to help them settle into school life."

Urdu to replace French

THE London School of Islamics wants British children to be taught Urdu and not French in school so that they can learn to respect and understand the Muslim community through Urdu literature and poetry. The Independent newspaper is backing their campaign arguing that the teaching of Urdu, instead of French, in British schools will improve race relations because pupils will share a common language.

The Trafalgar Square Statue Debate

For our miners not for Mandela

SINCE 1985 a statue of Nelson Mandela has stood outside the Royal Festival Hall on London's South Bank. Now the Greater London Authority want to erect another one, this time in Trafalgar Square.

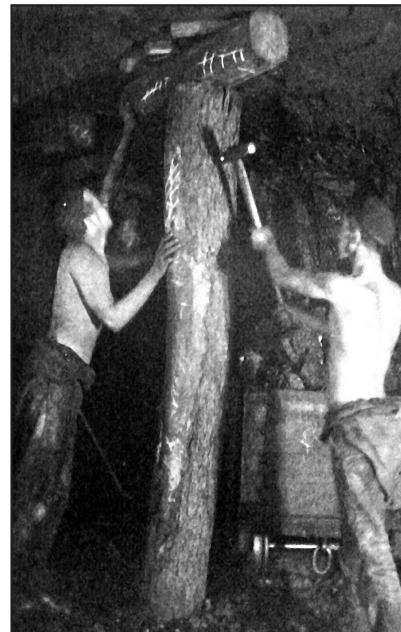

London Mayor Ken Livingstone, is backing the campaign for a nine-foot bronze statue of the former South African terrorist which would be placed on a six foot plinth. One of his spokesmen announced:

"The statue will be a salute by the people of Britain to the liberated people of South Africa and will symbolise the special ties between the two countries."

Sculptor Ian Waters sees the North Terrace of Trafalgar Square as the most fitting place in which this statue can express... "the universal recognition of Mandela's great humanity."

"This accessibility of the statue to the public, and the freedom to touch and stand against it is essential for a statue of Nelson Mandela. The statue needs calm space around it where people can gather and pause for reflection." The British National Party believes that there should be a monument to our country's miners in Trafalgar Square - not to a foreign terrorist.

BRITAIN'S MINERS: The bravest of men working in the most dangerous of conditions.

"It should be in recognition of the 200 years of service to Britain of these brave men who worked in the most dangerous of conditions to keep our lights burning brightly during the darkest of times.

The monument should be easily accessible to the public so they can come and stand against it and reflect on how the Tories butchered the industry in order to promote their globalisation agenda and how today's Labour Party has betrayed them, turning their back on British coal and preferring to import supplies from abroad.

MAKE YOUR VOICE HEARD:

Westminster City Council is the authority responsible for granting planning permission for statues in Trafalgar Square. Please contact them and tell them you would like to see a statue to Britain's miners NOT to Nelson Mandela.

You can write to them at Planning & City Development, Westminster City Hall, 64 Victoria Street, London SW1E 6QP or telephone them on (020) 7641 2513.

THE ARTS world is too White and not doing enough to attract people from ethnic minorities into senior roles.

That's the verdict of Culture Minister David Lammy, who said that many ethnic minorities when visiting Britain's museums and galleries might look around and think, "this place is not for me, I do not see anyone who looks like me."

Mr Lammy told a meeting of art experts that they were falling short of their obligations because those working in our cultural institutions were not reflective of society. The minister stressed that he wasn't talking about jobs such as receptionists or security guards but senior 'decision-making' positions

House of Bishops rejects witch-hunt against BNP clergy

ATTEMPTS to orchestrate a witch-hunt against members of the British National Party within the Anglican clergy have been rejected by the Church of England.

Daniel Kajumba, the Archdeacon of Reigate, and Vasantha Gnanadoss, a synod member from Southwark, wanted the House of Bishops to prohibit clergy from being members of the BNP. But the Bishop of Chelmsford, the Rt Revd John Gladwin rejected the move saying it would "take us into new and potentially problematic territory."

Mayor scraps carol service

THE traditional carol service held at Preston Town Hall was cancelled and will be replaced by a multi-cultural celebration to be held six weeks after Christmas.

Preston's mayor Bhikhu Patel who will host the event said:

"It will be a peace and harmony-type event, something culturally cohesive so it is more inclusive and appropriate in my mayoral year."

BNP campaign for a Miners' Memorial Day

NO ONE knows how many men and boys have died doing their duty for their country in our coal mines. 90,000 died in mine disasters alone in the sixty years before WW1, and including coal dust related diseases such as chronic bronchitis and pneumoconiosis, the total casualty figure is well over a million.

This Labour Government has just given the police their own Police Memorial Day for officers killed in the line of duty, and the British National Party believes that there should also be a Miners' Memorial Day.

There needs to be a special occasion when the country remembers all those miners who gave their lives miles under the ground, hewing out the coal that was the vital energy source in Britain of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

Secret Agent - The Sequel

THERE SHOULD only be one topic being discussed at British National Party meetings over the next few months and that is the local council elections in May.

These elections offer the BNP a great chance to increase still further our political influence within local communities, so selecting the right candidates and raising of sufficient money to fight effective campaigns should be the only topics under discussion.

If anyone stands up at one of our meetings and starts talking about 'wasting time on elections' or the need to take 'direct action against the government', they will probably be in the pay of the BBC. Their diatribe will be being secretly filmed by an undercover reporter for a follow-up programme to the Secret Agent, which was on our TV screens in the summer of 2004.

But this time the purpose of the programme won't be just to discredit the BNP in the eyes of the public as the last one did - it will be to provide the Government with its excuse to ban us.

Tony Blair and his colleagues know that if there is another suicide bombing they will have to take immediate action against Islamic fundamentalist groups in Britain. To do this without alienating more moderate Muslim opinion, and to appear even-handed, Blair will take the opportunity of banning the British National Party as well and he will use bogus statements from bogus 'BNP members' made at BNP meetings (all captured on tape by the BBC) as the reason for the ban.

It is a tradition at BNP meetings for the audience to politely listen when members and supporters make their points during the time for questions and any other business, but sadly this must now change.

IF ANYONE addresses a BNP meeting and talks about any other way to progress other than fighting elections, working within local communities and winning public support by selling our publications on the high street, they must be challenged immediately.

The Government see the charges against Nick Griffin and Mark Collett as the start of the demise of the BNP. In July they will be hoping that footage from Secret Agent - The Sequel will provide enough concocted evidence to see the British National Party banned for good.

The future of our party is in the hands of our officials and active membership and we must make sure this doesn't happen. Expose these likely BBC infiltrators as soon as they start spouting their nonsense and challenge any others who might sympathise with their 'Walter Mitty/behind the scenes' diversionary ideas.

With the Tory Party under Cameron ditching its last vestiges of interest in family values and patriotism, the BNP has its greatest opportunity ever to become a mainstream party. Our opponents know this too and they will be doing everything in their power to undermine this prospect.

Thoughts of Summer for Winter days

Red, White & Blue Family Festival 2006 : The Ribble Valley - Saturday 12th August and Sunday 13th August.

The energy crisis

SO MUCH for the Labour Government's claim to want to reduce carbon dioxide emissions.

It recently announced that the Leeds Supertram plan is to be axed and declined permission for Central Railways (CR) - a UK consortium of private companies - to take hundreds of thousands of lorries off the roads. CR want to re-open a main railway line between Manchester and the Channel Tunnel using trains designed to allow lorries to be "piggy backed" on to railway wagons.

With an all time low of bus passengers, declining timekeeping standards and public transport fares rocketing, the resulting increase of pollution caused by more road traffic, more road building and more congestion means that any reduction in carbon dioxide emissions by renewables and by going nuclear will be wiped out many times over.

The government is ignoring the most obvious reason for high carbon dioxide emissions - over population. The more people they let into Britain, the more oil we consume, the more roads we need to build, the more gas we use to heat our homes and the more houses we need to build on land where more trees that absorb this pollution need to be cut down to create more space.

The solutions to the immediate looming energy crisis are simple! Cut energy use by cutting the population! Close the borders and put the policies in place to encourage economic migrants and bogus asylum seekers to leave.

The BNP are the only hope this country has left if we are to face up to the real causes of our looming energy problems and tackle them head on!

Well done William

WHAT an inspiration 12 year-old William Warville is (Freedom No.66).

The initiative and wit of this young man who organised a sponsored silence amongst his friends, which resulted in £150 being raised, is to be applauded. Such a report lifts the spirits and bodes well for the future of the British National Party.

Or heartfelt thanks to William and everyone who is supporting Mark and Nick in their fight against New Labour's attempt to silence genuine opposition to its creeping totalitarianism.

The TA goes PC

I AM a serving member of the Territorial Army and I have just received our latest newsletter detailing next year's itinerary.

TA soldiers have to complete ITD (Individual Training Directives), also known as 'starred weekends', to gain our bounty or annual bonus payment. These ensure we are up to date on essential things such as weapon handling, drills, fitness, and other aspects of soldiering.

Now we have a new and 'essential' ITD to pass, 'equality and diversity' and I can well imagine what this will be about - yet more multicultural brainwashing! I am not racist in any way but I am becoming more and more disillusioned with an army that seems obsessed with political correctness.

TA soldier, Hull.

It's not Turkey!

I would like to make you aware of an error in Freedom No.66.

The article on page shows two young men being publicly executed and claims that Turkey is currently hanging petty criminals.

I would like to point out that this is not correct. The photo of the recent public hanging, although published in the leading Turkish daily paper, Hurriyet, was in fact of an execution in Iran. Turkey suspended capital punishment several years ago in the hope of meeting requirements to get accepted into the European Union.

Stephen Bailey, Lincoln.

EDITOR: Thank you for pointing out this discrepancy and apologies to our readers for the misleading impression this error might have created.

No women's rights?

THERE seems to be little or no opposition to the promotion of Sharia law within Britain.

Where on earth are our women's rights campaigners?

Under Islamic law, boys have to be 15 years old before they can face the death penalty, but girls as young as nine can be executed.

Surely there should be an outcry from the equality lobby at this disparity.

Billie White, Bridgewater.

Honour killings

YOU would have thought that the murder of 117 Pakistani and Bangladeshi girls in Britain over a two year period would have made all the media headlines.

But these murders are being deliberately ignored because they are 'honour killings' perpetrated by South Asian parents or brothers killing daughters whose lifestyles or ambitions they believe bring shame upon the family. Because of increased public scrutiny in Britain's Muslim community following the London bombings, Britain's media are deliberately covering up the extent of these 'honour killings' in Britain so as not to put Islam further under the spotlight.

The BBC, when reporting on local radio the sentence handed out to the father and brother of Manna Begum for the killing of their daughter, failed to mention the name or nationality of the family or that it was an 'honour killing'. To the casual listener it could have been about an ordinary British family.

I hope Freedom will continue to expose this sinister agenda within the news reporting of the BBC of deliberately hiding the extent of ethnic crime in order to promote multi-culturalism.

Margaret Sims, Oxford.

Our industrial heritage

CHILDREN in schools in the West Midlands have a total lack of knowledge of the region's industrial heritage.

I work as a teaching assistant at a secondary school in Coventry and am always greeted with astonished looks when I tell the children that this or another retail park, which now employs just 150 people was once a thriving factory manufacturing goods that Britain now has to import to meet the country's needs.

And those mouths drop even further open when I tell them that over 10,000 people were employed there and they supported the jobs of thousands more people who supplied goods and services to that factory.

It's a similar situation that probably extends across the country. Schools should be made to add such lost industrial heritage to the history curriculum. Our youngsters should know that Britain was once much better than it is now. Then Britain relied on the sweat of its own people rather than using cheap labour from abroad as we do today.

Name and address supplied.

The Chairman of the British National Party Nick Griffin briefs our readership on the BNP's contingency plans should he be sent to prison

Preparing to pay the price for warning about the growth of Islam

With 2006 just a few weeks old it is time to contemplate the circumstance of my being sent to prison as a result of the Government witch-hunt against the British National Party.

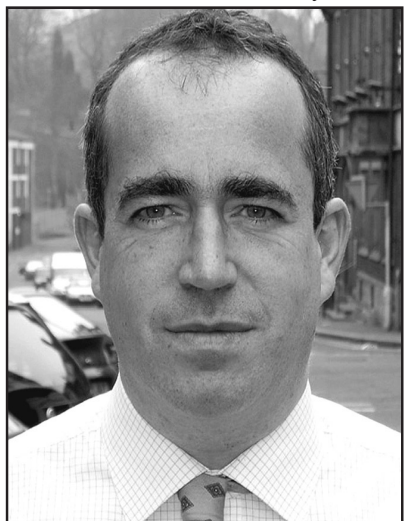

The Advisory Council has deemed it necessary that Simon Darby should immediately take over as Deputy Leader, with complete delegation of power from me on day-to-day decisions and personnel matters and that Scott McLean will remain as Deputy Chairman.

Simon Darby is quietly spoken, but he most assuredly is not soft. He has stuck it out in nationalist politics for nearly 20 years - learning a great deal about handling people and managing an under-resourced organisation in the process. As West Midlands Organiser, he patiently and skilfully turned his patch into one of our best regions.

Simon has an unrivalled gift for perfectly timed soundbites when doing media interviews. His most famous one, "we're the new kids on the block, and they don't like it" was all the more remarkable for the fact that Simon made it while all alone and under serious and immediate threat from a hostile mob of Labour Party thugs. Another marker of his physical and moral courage is that he was - until robbed of his Dudley seat by a boundary manipulation and campaign of deceit in the local press - one of our rare breed of councillors sitting as the only BNP member in the borough.

Add in his flair for propaganda ideas, a level-headed judgement of people and situations that have made him a highly valued colleague of mine for years now, and if I am sent to prison you will rapidly learn why I have every confidence in Simon Darby to steer the BNP through the dangers that will arise while I'm away.

SIMON DARBY: In the BNP hot seat if Nick Griffin is sent to prison.

It is not, after all, as if I'm going to be totally incommunicado. While most of my Visiting Orders will of course go to my family, there will still be letters, phone calls and some visits by which I can be consulted on issues. As a result I intend to remain in overall charge unless my sentence is so long that it becomes clear that for practical reasons a new leader needs to have the full authority of the post and a mandate from the membership. Overall, however, previous sentences under this 'law' suggest that, by the time 50% remission comes into play, Mark and I are unlikely to get such long sentences that the above scenario could arise.

The BNP nowadays is not a one or two-man band. There's a good team in place to enable the party to function as normal even if Mark Collett and I are imprisoned. The website, Freedom, leaflets, election material, merchandise, CDs, DVDs, membership, administration, treasury, the British National Lottery, successful meetings, the monthly literature delivery run - all these things and many others will carry on regardless. Our magazine, Identity, might slip, because experts in full colour DTP, such as Mark Collett, don't grow on trees. I hope it will not, because John Bean will still be here, and alternative plans have been made to provide the technical support he needs to keep the magazine appearing every month. Over the last four years things have changed beyond recognition in the British political arena. The British National Party in general and Nick Griffin in particular are now known by millions for our warnings on the growth of Islam.

But it is one thing merely to warn, and another entirely to stand by that warning and pay the price for doing so in going to prison. The stand being made by Mark Collett and myself on this issue, which is of concern to millions of Britons, provides the British National Party with political credibility of incalculable value in its struggle to win back our country.

ST ANDREWS DAY: Glasgow organiser Walter Hamilton and BNP website editor, Steve Blake, have the floor.

Glasgow meeting raises £5,700 for Scottish parliamentary elections

THE ANNUAL British National Party St. Andrew's Day meeting was held this year in Glasgow and raised a record collection that amazed even veteran members present.

Ninety people attended the meeting at a plush hotel in the city and helped raise a fantastic £5,700 to allow Glasgow BNP to campaign more vigorously in preparation for the Scottish Parliamentary elections in May 2007.

The first speaker of the day was Glasgow Organiser Walter Hamilton, who highlighted the injustices heaped on local people by the Labour Government and by political correctness. Walter called on Glaswegians to make a stand for their city by joining the BNP and working to secure election success in the near future.

Scottish Regional Secretary Kenny Smith, followed with a controversial appeal for members to take a leaf out of Sinn Fein's book. Kenny called for the BNP to engage more heavily in community campaigning and community politics to improve our communities and build the grassroots support needed to achieve electoral success, as Sinn Fein had done.

The Party's Website Editor, Steve Blake, then gave a detailed, varied and often-humorous talk on progress in 2005 and the obstacles overcome. Steve said these were exciting times for Nationalists and urged members to grab the opportunities that were presenting themselves to us.

Meeting chairman Scott McLean, the Scottish Regional Organiser and National Deputy Chairman, brought the first half to a close as the fabulous collection was taken.

Party Chairman Nick Griffin, displaying a photograph from a Scottish Executive funded advert for Scottish pride and passion, which depicted non-indigenous Scots as the ideal, warned of the future loss of identity and heritage for real Scots if we did not resist this type of propaganda and social engineering. He said that there was still time for Scotland but members and supporters needed to act now to show Scots that the BNP was the only political party campaigning on their behalf.

Blackpool conference on the cards for 2006

BLACKPOOL is emerging as a "major contender" to host the British National Party annual conference next October.

Chairman of Blackpool BNP Roy Goodwin, who stood in Blackpool South at the General Election, hopes the party will move the conference from London where it was held last year to the popular northern seaside resort.

"I personally think it's a great idea and have been arguing for Blackpool, Roy told Freedom.

"We've held other meetings in Blackpool with as many as 200 people and have never had a problem with booking any of the major hotels. We also hold monthly meetings here.

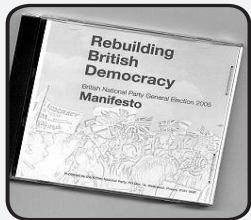

"I've spoken to Nick Griffin and he agreed Blackpool is a major contender for the next conference.

"We have a lot of supporters in the North West and Scotland who might not want to travel all the way down to London so it makes sense to have it somewhere more accessible to everyone."

Colin Asplin, president of the Blackpool Hotel and Guest House Association said:

"Blackpool needs to get people coming back to the town, especially if the Conservative Party stops holding its conferences here. The Labour Party has already deserted us for Brighton."

Burton provides fertile ground for the BNP

THE newly established British National Party group in Burton upon Trent Group held a highly successful social at an excellent venue in the town centre, where more than 60 members and supporters were welcomed to a fund raising event.

Those in attendance ranged from families with young children to a bemedalled WW2 veteran and the atmosphere was one of determination to raise the party's profile in a once traditional British town which because of immigration, is changing beyond recognition.

First up came a speech by Sadie Graham, East Midlands Regional Organiser, followed by Julie Russell, the Burton candidate in last May's parliamentary election, who won nearly 2000 votes for the BNP in spite of competition from UKIP and Veritas. "Their votes and ours," Julie pointed out, "totalled 4000, showing what fertile ground there is for the nationalist message here in Burton."

The political agenda of the evening was rounded off by Peter Francis from Leicestershire BNP, who denounced the treasonable incompetence of Labour, the Tories and Lib-Dems.

The social side then got underway with Julie and her sister providing some brilliant vocal and instrumental folk music which drew well-deserved applause. Then followed an enjoyable buffet and the chance for members to circulate, get to know one another and plan future activities.

The success of this event clearly puts Burton on the map, and the fantastic collection of £340 shows the resolve and commitment of those who braved a chilly night to make our first social such a memorable and enjoyable activity.

Bishop Jack gets a BNP petition

SHEFFIELD BNP members organised a petition against the decision of the Bishop of Sheffield to host a display of Islamic art and teachings at the city's cathedral. Local shoppers queued to sign the petition which was later presented to the Right Reverend John Nicholls (or Bishop Jack as he likes to be known) and a copy was sent to the local newspaper. One lady summed up the feelings of many when she told the campaigners: "Can you imagine Sheffield's new Islamic centre and mosque on Wolseley Road allowing a display of Christian art and teachings? I think not!" "I'm signing this petition because I think it is about time we started standing up for our traditional religion, the Christian religion, and promoted its teachings rather than fawning over other religions which are alien to this country."

It's a superb newspaper!

ONE avid reader of Freedom so enjoys receiving his copy of the newspaper each month that he has sponsored a prize to the British National Lottery.

John Evans from Redbridge sent £55 to the British National Lottery and asked that it be used to provide a prize of FIVE one year subs to Freedom. John told the BNL administrator, Kenny Smith:

"Freedom is a superb newspaper. It's realistic and down to earth, promoting the British National Party as it actually is. Hopefully my prize will prompt five more people to join our crusade." The prize will be up for grabs in the June lottery draw.

Papersale in Coalville and Ashby

ON THE last Saturday before Christmas the first papersale for over two years was held in the Leicestershire towns of Coalville and Ashby. British National Party members from North West Leicestershire and Loughborough sold 21 copies of Freedom during an hour in each town a vast improvement on the last time a paper sale was held there.

500 'Save our Christmas' leaflets were also handed out and there was a positive response from shoppers. "Despite the bitterly cold weather it was a very worthwhile activity," Wayne McDermott told Freedom. "We will be returning once a month in the new year and I'm confident that when there's not the distraction of Christmas shopping we will sell well in excess of 50 copies in each town."

The British National Party RECRUITMENT LEAFLETS

£8.00 for 1,000

IMMIGRATION? OPEN YOUR EYES

This hard-hitting anti-immigration leaflet draws attention to the alarming figures that show that Britons will be a minority in their own country by 2060.

BUILDING A FUTURE FOR OUR CHILDREN

Links the BNP's election success in Burnley with our policies on law & order and immigration. Also includes details of membership and the BNP's publications.

"If only I could seek asylum"

Like millions of other British pensioners, Margaret paid taxes all her working life. She's a widow, because Jack survived the ship being torpedoed during the war only to die of an industrial disease. These days, she gets by on a pension and does some odd jobs for local firms. She's a hard worker, but she's not getting any younger. She's a widow, because Jack survived the ship being torpedoed during the war only to die of an industrial disease. These days, she gets by on a pension and does some odd jobs for local firms. She's a hard worker, but she's not getting any younger.

£ Her rent, council tax, water rates, insurance, electricity and telephone bills would all be picked up by a taxpayer
£ She'd be sent right to the front of the housing queue
£ We'd replace that old cooker, and put in full central heating
£ She'd be given a brand new 20" screen colour TV - and have the licence fee paid every year
£ We'd even pay to have her windows cleaned every 12 weeks

These are just a few of the benefits which are set out in the secret Revised Joint Taxation Agreement that is signed between the Home Office and every landlord providing accommodation for asylum seekers. The entire document can be viewed online at www.bnp.org.uk/articles/asylum.htm

All these children would be alive today if our spineless politicians had the guts to declare war on the paedophiles

John from Ipswich, Susan from Warrington, Caroline from Huddersfield, Sarah from Huddersfield, David from Huddersfield, and David from Huddersfield. The killers of all these children were either known or convicted paedophiles - like dozens of other child-killers. How many more must die before something is done?

Only when we lock away the pervers who prey on our children, removing them from society completely, will our streets and playgrounds be safe again. And for the paedophiles who kill the victims, the only just punishment, with DNA evidence, is the rope.

IF ONLY I COULD SEEK ASYLUM

Make no mistake, asylum seekers are invading our country. Arriving at the rate of 300,000 a year, it's costing us £1.3 billion annually to look after them.

KEEP OUR CHILDREN SAFE

"These children would be alive today if our spineless politicians had the guts to declare war on paedophiles," says this powerful leaflet condemning child abusers.

CRIME IS OUT OF CONTROL!

CRIME IN BRITAIN IS OUT OF CONTROL! Every time we switch on our TV or pick up a newspaper, we hear endless reports about murders, rapes, burglaries, car thefts and muggings. Britain used to be a peaceful country where crime was rare, where old ladies and children could walk the streets at night, without fear of mugging, rape or worse. People could leave their doors unlocked without fear of burglary. Whatever happened?

Nowadays pensioners are mugged in their homes, young children are abducted in parks and on their homes, cars and property are at risk every day from criminals. Our young people roam the streets, abandoned by the system to a life of crime and degeneracy. What has been done about the crime explosion?

Nothing! The courts and the judges are too soft, the politicians would rather help the criminal and penalise the victim, and the police have their hands tied firmly behind their backs. Society seems powerless against the criminal. What is going wrong?

Believe it or not, it all starts with your vote! To put it bluntly, if you vote Lib-Lab-Con, you vote for crime and anarchy on your streets! It's as simple as that. The police have to be allowed to do their job, without interference from politically correct Lib-Lab-Con politicians, and the judges and the courts have to get to apply stricter sentences. The British National Party is the party of law and order - the only party in Britain that will stand up to the criminals and protect the public. By voting Lib-Lab-Con, you vote for crime, by voting BNP you vote for a crackdown on crime. Simple choice!

STOP THE BUILDING

A TIDAL WAVE of development is wrecking hundreds of villages and market towns. A flood of concrete is destroying thousands of acres of prime farmland, beauty spots and the habitats of rare and endangered wildlife.

What is planned around here is only a small part of the big picture. 1,000 square miles of virgin countryside is being bulldozed to make way for 8.5 million new homes by the year 2016. With an average of 1.7 children per couple, the numbers of the native British population are actually falling. So why do we need all the extra houses? The official story is that it is because of the increasing number of people who live alone.

The real reason is that Britain's population is growing because of continued mass immigration, and because of the high birthrate of the immigrant communities already here. Not only do all these extra people have to be housed, but 'white flight' from cities dominated by foreign cultures and attitudes is the big, unspoken, reason why so many people want to move out to new developments in rural areas.

We are approaching a quarter of a million immigrants a year for the first time in our history. That means a population increase of almost seven million in 25 years.

Migrationwatch UK, 2002
New households are being created at a rate of more than 220,000 per year.
House Builders' Federation, 2002
These facts are well known by the planners and politicians, but multiculturalism is a sacred cow these days. They'd rather pour concrete all over rural Britain than stop immigration.

CRIME IS OUT OF CONTROL

With soaring crime rates hitting inner city, suburban and rural areas alike, this leaflet outlines the BNP's 'zero tolerance' stance in combatting crime.

STOP THE BUILDING!

Under Labour, as with the Tories, Britain's greenbelt land is being built on at a frightening rate. We look at the people and companies behind this rural destruction.

Please help us keep Nick and Mark safe!

WE ENTER the New Year with Nick Griffin and Mark Collett - and their families - facing a gruelling trial and possible long prison sentences simply for telling the truth.

While the legal hearings so far have produced some pieces of good news (we are unable to tell you about these at present as reporting restrictions are still in force) the rotten core of the matter is that the 'offences' for which they go on trial on January 16th carry a prison sentence of up to seven years.

We can tell you that a major part of the defence evidence will concentrate on the nature and extent of the threat posed to our freedoms and way of life by Islamic fundamentalism.

The prosecution have been put on notice that among the subjects that will be covered are Islam and violence, Islam and sexual aggression, and Islam and hatred of unbelievers. Some of this material is dynamite and we hope to leave the Labour Government wishing they had never opened this can of worms!

How much of this evidence will be quoted in the media is anyone's guess, but while we're hoping for extensive coverage the fact is that such very welcome publicity would bring with it one extra problem.

LESSON: Dutch Nationalist leader Pim Fortuyn, was gunned down by opponents when he visited a radio station. Nick and Mark must never be left in vulnerable situations during their trial in Leeds.

There is the very real danger of violent retaliation from the gangs of Muslim terrorists that even the government admits are just waiting to go into 'murder mode'.

HIGH PROFILE: Daily BNPtv reports from the trial will take advantage from the increased public interest in the BNP that the case will provide.

This means that for the two weeks which this court case may last, the British National Party is having to put in place all sorts of extraordinary security precautions in connection with this trial.

We also have to raise extra money for a significant upgrade of our multi-media capabilities so that we can provide a daily BNPtv report of the trial and so get the best possible advantage from the increased public interest that we are bound to see during the case.

As a result, the BNP has launched a special Security Fund to raise £12,000 over and above our normal income at this time of year. Subscriptions and general donations have to be spent on running the party's day-to-day activities, and on improving our organisation for the future; if we don't raise this Security Fund money as extra funds then either the BNP's general operations or Nick and Mark's security will be put at risk.

The only way of reaching this vital £12,000 by January 16th is if large numbers of our supporters dig deep and donate as much as possible right now. We know it's only just after Christmas, but the safety of Nick and Mark is our main priority during the trial at Leeds Crown Court.
